HINDOOS TRY TO HOLD MR. REID AS A HOSTAGE

Offer Freedom in Exchange for Provisions, But Immigration Officer Forces His Way
Off-Komagata.

Although the government officials announce that they will not provision the Komagata Maru it is likely that that course will become necessary. The owners, who are at Kobe, Japan, refuse provisions, placing the responsibility upon the charterers, who first were Gurdit Singh and his followers, and later were a committee of Vancouver Hindus. The Gurdit Singh outfit confesses to bankruptcy, and the shore Hindus refuse to put up any more money now that the courts have decided the Komagata men cannot last here. The people on the Koma-gata cannot be allowed to starve, and it is to the interest of all concerned to speed the departing guests. If the government can force the owners to pay for the provisions, that may be accomplished in some way later, possibly by the libeling of the ship.

So soon as the proposition was clearly laid before the immigration officials that the Komagata Hindus were willing to waive any further judicial or semi-judicial proceedings and return to Hongkong provided the ship was provisioned, the officers prepared to complete the proceedings of the board of inquiry, and this move, regarded as hostile was met by something approaching rebellion aboard the Komagata.

Prior to the arrival of Superintendent Malcolm R. J. Reid, Inspector Hopkinson, Mr. Howard, and two lady stenographers, constituting the board of inquiry on the Komagata, requests were received by the officials for food and water, and these were referred to Mr. J. Edward Bird, representing the Komagata Hindus and the Vancouver charterers of the vessel. The Hindus, being short of provisions, were not in a happy mood and the re-opening of the board of inquiry, ordered by the department at Ottawa, seemed to act as an extreme irritant. The Hindus crowded around the officials upon the arrival on the ship in a threatening manner. The Hindu committee in charge refused to allow the board to allow the inquiry to proceed, and the discussion became so animated that Mr. Reid judged it wise to send the two lady stenographers ashore forthwith.

Bluff Did Not Work.

After further discussion the Hindoos informed Mr. Reid that he would not be permitted to leave the ship until provisions were sent out. But Mr.
Reid did not propose to be bluffed, and finally he made his way out of the cabin by take-back door, shouldered a pathway through the Hindus and went down the ladder to the launch, his departure being a signal for howls of wrath from the Koma-gata's passengers.

Later in the evening Mr. Reid, with other officials, and a cargo of provisions returned to the Komagata and Inspector Hopkinson, the interpreter, held parley with the Hindus before boarding the ship. Instructed by Mr.
Reid, Mr. Hopkinson told the Hindus that the provisioning of the ship was a matter between the owners, the char-terers and the captain of the ship, and neither the government nor the city was responsible. They were also informed that the officers regretted that the Hindus had been "misled by certain attorneys," both before the departure from Hongkong and after their arrival here with promises that they would win through. The superintendent also informed the Hindus that they were under the laws of the city and must obey the same. To this the Hindus replied that they would interfere with no one if they were not interfered with.

The partying having concluded, Mr.
Reid ordered the provisions taken aboard and a remarkable change became noticeable in the attitude of the Hindus. When Superintendent Reid and his officers departed for shore, the Hindus wished them "Godspeed."

Mr. Reid yesterday received the following letter from Mr. Bird:

"Dear Sir—Mr. Pratt, of my office, has called me up asking me to see you and Mr. Ladner, one of your counsel, in connection with the serious condition on board ship, owing to the starvation of passengers on board the Komagata Maru. There are numbers of men on board this ship that are now there under deportation order, and all have done what they could to put themselves in your control for deportation. I would respectfully point out that these men are in effect, and some of them are actually, under arrest and held in detention for deportation, and they are only bound to put up $20 apiece to provide food for themselves in case they are appealing to the minister. This implies that you are to feed them while you are holding them for deportation, and you will fail in this at your peril."

"Yours truly, J. EDWARD BIRD."

In answer to a communication, asking for instructions, Mr. Reid received a telegraphic message from the department of immigration at Ottawa yesterday, which ran as follows:

"Complete boards of enquiry as rapidly as possible, carefully complying with the provisions of the law. In view of difficulties surrounding deportation via Komagata Maru you may suggest to the master of the ship that the department is willing to arrange to deport the passengers by other vessels, provided the owners of the Komagata Maru give security for payment of expenses so incurred. The department understand that the Japanese consul will urge this course upon the captain. Facilitate lightening ship's cargo."
