1977-78 A Handbook for Indians in Ottawa-Hull.
Mimeo 13 pp. Selected pages
Ottawa, Ontario.

Herewith please find the 1977-78 edition of my 'Handbook for Indians in Ottawa-Hull' just out. I hope you would like to retain it, and, if so, kindly be good enough to mail a cheque for $ 1-50 to me on the following address. Otherwise, I shall be grateful if the publication is mailed back to me.

PRE

It was at the instance of some friends that I undertook to bring out the first edition of this handbook in 1975 in the full hope that it would be found useful by the Indian community residing in the national capital region of Ottawa-Hull.

I was happy to find that my expectations were not belied. In fact, I felt more than gratified that it had served its purpose. This was apparent from the encouraging response and warm appreciation that I received from different quarters for this individual effort and first venture of its kind. I was thus prompted to take up its revision in 1976 and 1977 to bring it up to date.

The preparation of the telephone directory included in this revised edition was again a time-consuming process, involving my having to get into touch with a large number of new subscribers of telephones to ascertain their first names and verify their addresses. Quite a good proportion of others too who had, in the course of the past one year or so, either moved to different residential localities or changed their jobs had to be contacted for the purpose. This time, however, my task was made still more easy and simple because of the whole-hearted co-operation extended to me by those as already had an opportunity of seeing the two editions, which they acknowledged as something out of the ordinary.

It is most unfortunate that even now a good number of persons, apart from those already unlisted, have chosen to have themselves excluded from the handbook, in spite of the fact that their names, addresses and phone numbers appear in the Bell Canada directory. It was surprising that while, on the one hand, some persons, unnecessarily, hesitated to supply information that I voluntarily offered, the feeling is that one not co-operate had taken the trouble of picking up and perusing the first two editions carefully they would not have shown the reluctance they did. However, in deference to their wishes, I had regretfully to omit their names.

I was glad to find that a good number of those who had first entertained misgivings about this enterprise of mine, and were disinclined to be associated with it in any way, changed their minds after seeing the publication and readily condescended to participate in it. This gives me hope that even the others who may not yet have been convinced in their minds about its utility as a ready reference handbook as complete as possible.

Apart from the historical and geographical features and political systems of Canada and India and information about immigration regulations, this edition contains some additional reading material. It includes write-ups on India's cultural heritage, religious festivals and write-ups on the National Association of Canadians of Origins in India and other Indian social and cultural organisations in the capital.

For all consular matters, liberalisation of Government policy in respect of operation of non-resident external accounts in India and facilities for non-residents to invest savings in India, readers may refer to the previous two editions, copies of which can still be made available.

It is quite likely that, in spite of all the precautions taken, some inadvertent mistakes, typographical or otherwise, may have crept in here and there, and for this I would crave the indulgence of my readers. It is also possible that the handbook, as a whole, may still be lacking in some respects and, if so, I shall welcome suggestions for further improvements.

Lastly, I would like to express my deep sense of gratitude to my friends and well-wishers for the advice they have readily given me from time to time. I am also indebted to the Indian High Commission for the encouragement I received at its hands in this endeavour of mine always and every time.

NUCLEAR CO-OPERATION WITH INDIA FOR 20 YEARS

Canada's major contribution to India in the sphere of science and technology has been the supply of a research reactor installed at the Bhaba Atomic Research Centre at Trombay, near Bombay, and a two-unit nuclear power station in Rajasthan.

First project of its kind undertaken in the field of international co-operation, the research reactor at Trombay (which came to be known as 'CIRUS') went into operation on July 10, 1960. It has since been used for developing fuels, testing fuel-coolant systems for power reactors, conducting atomic experiments and producing radio-active isotopes for utilisation in medicine, agriculture and industry.

The CIRUS is a modified version of the NRX reactor at Chalk River in Canada, and its start-up climaxed five years of close collaboration between the scientists, engineers and technicians of the two countries. In this contest, the names of Dr. Homi H. Bhabha, Dr. Vikram Sarabhai, Dr. W.B. Lewis and Dr. Lorne Gray come to one's mind. The occasion marked the successful completion of experimentation in the peaceful uses of atomic energy started in 1955.

The reactor was built through the Colombo Plan as a joint project of Canada and India, with the United States participating in it to the extent that it supplied the heavy water used as moderator for the reactor. Canada's share of the cost — which included the reactor, the start-up and the training of Indian personnel — was provided through a $10.8 million grant and counterpart funds of $15 million. It provided Indian engineers and scientists with the means of carrying out advanced fundamental research.

UNDER COLOMBO PLAN

It was in April 1955 that the Canadian Government had first informed the Government of India that Canada was prepared to consider supplying to India under the Colombo Plan a research reactor of the NRX type. Excavations for the foundation of the CIRUS began in Trombay in February 1956 and a formal agreement between the two countries was signed in New Delhi in April the same year. The Atomic Energy of Canada, Limited, undertook to train 48 Indian engineers and operators at Chalk River. When the reactor started operating on a regular basis, Indians assumed full control and the AECL staff returned to Canada. Dr. H.N. Sethna, the present Chairman of the Atomic Energy Commissions of India, was the Project Manager during the early stages of the CIRUS construction.

Later, in 1964, an agreement was signed whereby Canada supplied to India with a 200,000-kilowatt nuclear power plant. In 1967, the agreement was extended to provide for a second unit of the same capacity. Using a nuclear system (CANDU) designed and developed in Canada, this station is intended ultimately to produce more than 400,000 kilowatts of power. The acronym

CANDU stands for Canada-Deuterium-Uranium, signifying that the reactor is a Canadian development that uses deuterium oxide (heavy water) and natural uranium in fuel.

A FEASIBILITY STUDY

The decision by India to go in for a Canadian-type nuclear power station followed a 1961-62 feasibility study which included a review of all available alternatives. Its design is based on the Douglas Point Nuclear Power Station, Canada's first full-scale nuclear-electric generating plant.

The Rajasthan station consists of two units, the first of which went into operation in 1972, while the second is expected to begin functioning in 1977. The project has been financed by the Indian Government with the aid of loans provided by Canada's Export Development Corporation. The Canadian loan for the first unit amounted to $43.5 million and for the second $38.5 million.

Shipments of nuclear material and equipment to India were suspended in May 1974 soon after India exploded an underground atomic device as an experiment for peaceful purposes. Canada's contention was that even peaceful explosions of the kind could lead to nuclear proliferation.

As the differences were profound and could not be resolved during meetings held both in Ottawa and in New Delhi/Bombay for two years, the Canadian Government announced in May 1976 that further co-operation with India in this field was not possible.

The two-unit nuclear power station in Rajasthan, which, using the Candu reactor system developed in Canada, is designed ultimately to produce more than 400,000 kilowatts of electricity.

ECONOMIC ASSISTANCE TO INDIA

Biggest Beneficiary of Canada's Aid in Asia

Asia has remained the largest recipient of Canadian economic assistance, and within this region India has been the greatest beneficiary.

Canada made a major effort at alleviating the effect of the 1971 Indo-Pakistani war, and the initial emergency relief program of the Canadian International Development Agency under the External Affairs Department, was transformed into one of reconstruction and development, although the food, fertiliser and energy crises did retard it to a certain extent.

Since it began its international development assistance program almost 25 years ago, Canada had allocated to India $1,220 million worth of economic aid up to the end of 1973-74, whereafter it was suspended along with the stoppage of shipments of nuclear material and equipment. Of this, more than 50 per cent. took the form of grants, including food aid, with the balance in highly concessional loans. Food aid has, however, since continued.

Canada devoted $77 million — nearly one-half of its bilateral allocation for Asia — to India in 1973-74. This assistance was tailored to the Canadian economy to respond to Indian needs and priorities, and was concentrated in those fields where Canadians were most experienced and their products and resources most effective.

LARGE FOOD SUPPLIES

Apart from food aid, Canada's economic assistance to India has been in the fields of communications, transportation, oil exploration, industrial research, power and irrigation and refugee relief. A major part of this has been in the form of grants.

Canada has also been an active member of the Aid-India Consortium formed from among the donor countries in 1958 under the aegis of the

*Originally known as CIR (Canada-India Reactor), the Trombay research reactor was renamed CIRUS — a name selected by Dr. Bhabha. While retaining its original letters this new name phonetically perpetuates the memory of the great historical figure Cyrus, founder of the Archaemenid dynasty in Persia in the sixth century B.C. Cyrus was a wise and generous ruler who assumed the title of 'King of the World'.

FOOD LARGEST SINGLE COMPONENT OF CIDA'S BILATERAL AID PROGRAM

International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

Canada's food has remained the largest single component of CIDA's bilateral assistance program in India over the past two decades or so, and the Federal Government had spent more than half a billion dollars on this, exclusive of shipments of fertilisers, until 1976. During 1975-76, CIDA had sent $64 million worth of food to India, bringing the overall total for 25 years right from 1951-52 to the end of 1975-76 to nearly $600 million. The food-aid allocation to India for 1975-76 amounted to $56 million, i.e., $8.2 million more than that in 1974-75.

Up to the time of going to press, the subject of resumption of non-food economic aid to India was still under the active consideration of the Canadian Government.

The history of Canadian aid began with shipments of wheat to India in the early 1950's, and, ever since, the program for India has always been Canada's largest, averaging annually about $90 million in recent years.

$1.3 BILLION ASSISTANCE

The aid totalled $1.3 billion over the past quarter-century. Close to half of this had been food aid, because India's large population — now more than 600 million, or 40 per cent. of the Third World's people — puts heavy pressure on food supplies, which are adequate only when growing conditions are ideal.

With a view to overcoming the complex problems of India's development, the Canadian program has included everything from snowblowers to keep mountain-roads open to equipment for the country's first oceanographic research vessel to help develop fisheries and underwater resources.

Major projects have included large dams to produce hydro-electric power and irrigation water, telephone and satellite communication equipment and railway locomotives and components.

When in May 1974 India exploded a nuclear device, Canada suspended, and later cancelled, the longstanding program of nuclear co-operation. Food aid and agricultural assistance were, however, continued and previous aid agreements honoured, but the economic program as a whole was placed under review.

Two-thirds of the $98.9 million in disbursements during 1975-76 were for food aid to supplement India's disappointing 1974-75 crops. The remainder, $32.4 million in loans and $1.9 million in grants, financed such ongoing projects as the addition of bulk handling fertiliser facilities to cut delays at three of India's ports.

IDIKKI HYDEL PROJECT

The prestigious Canadian-aided Idikki hydro-electric project in India's southernmost State of Kerala was dedicated to the nation February 1976 after the inauguration of the commercial production of power from it when its first 130-megawatt generator was switched inside the underground powerhouse.

The Idikki project has an installed capacity of 780 megawatt of power and, by harnessing the waters of the Periyar River, it will irrigate 60,000 hectares of land. Five more generators will be installed in two phases during the next few years.

The project consists of a complex of three dams, namely the 555-foot-high Idikki arch dam across the Periyar, the 450-foot-high Cheruthoni dam across the Cheruthoni tributary and the 328-foot-high Kuravan dam.

SUPPORT FOR RESEARCH

Since its creation in 1970, the International Development Research Centre of Canada, a public corporation, has given grants to India to the extent of $1,253,320 in support of research designed to adapt science and technology to the specific needs of the country.

The organisations and institutions that have benefitted from these grants are the Indian Council of Agricultural Research, the Govind Ballabh Pant University of Agriculture and Technology, the Central Inland Fisheries Research Institute, the Small Industry Extension Training Institute, the Indian Council of Medical Research and the Bureau of Public Enterprises.

The projects have related to (a) improving the quality of principal cereal grains and food legumes made on small farms, (b) conducting research on triticale to increase food production in the unirrigated areas of rain-fed plains and hills, (c) developing highly productive systems of composite fish culture in village ponds and other inland waters in West Bengal and Orissa, (d) conducting studies on low-cost housing, (e) studying the mortality and morbidity rates and the side-effects of tubal ligation among women, and (f) analysing the working of public-sector undertakings.

In addition, the IDRC has given grants of a total of $596,000 to the International Crop Research Institute for Semi-Arid Tropics (ICRISAT) set up by it in Hyderabad for developing varieties of pigeon-pea and chicken-pea and maintaining the sorghum program.

The Rs. 1,100 million Idikki hydro-electric project is one of the biggest in India.

Shastri Institute A Unique Education Enterprise

The activities of the Shastri Indo-Canadian Institute, established in 1968 for the enhancement of mutual understanding between the two countries, was extended for a further period of three years with the signing of an agreement in New Delhi in December 1974.

During the three years, the Government of India will give a grant of Rs. 3.6 million at the rate of Rs. 1.2 million per annum. The grant will be utilised for the promotion of academic and cultural exchanges between the two countries.

Formally started by a joint announcement by the two Governments and named after the late Prime Minister of India, Mr. Lal Bahadur Shastri, the Institute represents a unique educational enterprise. With the support of the two Governments, it endeavours to educate Canadians on the riches of India's past heritage and the challenges of its developing present.

ADVANCING INDIAN STUDIES

The universities and the National Library of Canada are co-operating in the advancement of Indian studies through (a) the allocation of junior and senior fellowships and language training grants, (b) the acquisition of Indian publications for the libraries of Canadian universities, and (c) the operation of special educational projects for undergraduates and school teachers.

Apart from the National Library, the other member institutions are the universities of British Columbia, Brock, Carleton, Concordia, Manitoba, McGill, McMaster, Queen's, Toronto and Windsor.

The Institute is governed by a Board of Directors composed of representatives from each of its member institutions and the High Commissioner for India in Canada. Advisory councils exist in Canada and India to assist the Board in guiding the work of the Institute. The High Commissioner for Canada in India is a member of the advisory council in India, of which the Secretary of the Ministry of Education is chairman. The head office of the Institute is located at McGill University in Montreal, with an office in New Delhi.

RESEARCH FELLOWSHIPS

Fellowships for research study and language training in India are offered to junior and senior scholars in the humanities and social sciences in Canada. In the selection of fellows — both Canadian citizens and landed immigrants — primary consideration is given to the professional competence of the applicants and the suitability of their projects in view of the Institute's primary objective of promoting the knowledge of India and Canada.

The purpose of the library acquisition program is to acquire Indian documents for scholarly use in Canada. For this, the Institute purchases current Indian Government and commercial publications in English, vernacular and classical languages. The National Library and the universities of B.C., Toronto and McGill have been selected to house extensive research collections.
